Farm Update

Darren McNae, Farm Advisor, AgFirst Consultants

As we head toward the end of the financial year, there is no denying that it has been a challenging year for the sheep and beef sector. It has been well documented through the media just how tough farmers are doing it at present with reduced market prices and rising costs. The latest Beef+Lamb NZ report showed that farm profits are set to drop by another 54% this year (compared to last year) and at their lowest level since the 1980's. This is quite serious for the industry, particularly, when we consider that the outlook for the next 12 months is for much of the same. It really is a case of battenning down the hatches and making sure that every dollar is prioritised until we have some reprieve – something every farmer is doing at present. Thankfully, the Trust remains well positioned to do this after a number of years of strong investment. The focus for the Trust has been ensuring that the productive potential of the land remains strong which has meant prioritising the fertiliser spend to make sure that the farms can still grow plenty of grass to feed stock in the coming years.

From this perspective, the second “wet” summer in a row in the King Country has almost had the feeling of the King Country of old, back when we talked about the region being “summer safe”! This has helped the farms grow plenty of grass and set the farms up well for winter. Having good feed on hand and stock looking good and fat is a positive as we head into next season. This will mean the opportunity to produce plenty of lambs and heavy cattle next year to help keep the income coming in. There is plenty of work underway at present reviewing the livestock systems and ensuring that the farms are operating in the best way possible – this review is as a full team so everyone is on board.

The regulatory space is very much in “watch and wait” at present while we look to see where the new rules will land. While this may dictate future land use to a degree, the Trust is already taking an approach of sound land management so is likely ahead of the rules in many areas. The real danger for many farms is to do nothing while we wait on some rules. It is better to continue to make decisions that are good for the whenua (provided they do not cost a lot at present) be they big or small and ensure the plan keeps heading in the right direction. Environmental pathways are like being on a train – it will slow and stop every now and again, but it will reach its destination.

We look forward to improved times in the future but remain comforted that the Trust is not alone on this journey and the challenges being faced are by all farmers and as a country we have been here before, and come out the other side stronger.

Meeting with the Waitomo District Council

A meeting between The Trustees and the Waitomo District Council was held last month. The major issues discussed revolved around Mangaokewa Road.

Over the years the Trust has had issues with the dust from vehicles travelling on this road.

Recently the Trustees were concerned about the increase of trucks carting metal if resource consent is granted for a quarry near the farms.

Council has agreed to look at these issues and try to find a solution that both parties will be happy with.

After the meeting Trustees were able to take the Councillors to view the Waitatara Native Nursery, which they were very impressed with.
